Editorial

An ordinary man lives at two levels of existence (1) External and (2) Internal, and very often he is unable to create a balance between both of them. But a literary person lives in the third level of consciousness where he builds his own creative cosmos. If we try to compare all these realms, we find that the satisfaction and a sense of accomplishment which is there in the world of knowledge and Research, can not be found any where else. There is a kind of clash and conflict between the earlier two and the third one consists of complete freedom. It attains the highest peaks and fathoms the depths of knowledge and creativity and thus expands to the endless horizons. The purpose of Research Journals is to share this length and breadth of knowledge with the scholars. With this intention, I along with my team, offer you the third volume of this Research Journal.
