Examination to be held in Dec-2025, 2026 and 2027

Sr. No.	Course No.	Title of the Course	Contact Hours/Week L-Tu-P	Maximum Marks	Credits
1.	P2DSTC101	Fundamentals of Defence and Strategic Studies	4-1-0	100	4

Maximum Marks: 100

(a) Major Exam: 60
(b) Minor Tests-I & II: 20 each

(Duration of Major Examination: 3 hrs)
(Duration of Minor Tests: 1hr)

Course Outcome:

Upon successful completion of this course, students will develop a comprehensive understanding of the core principles, theories, and contemporary issues related to strategic studies and national security. The course begins with an exploration of the evolution of Defence and Strategic Studies, emphasizing its interdisciplinary nature and key foundational concepts such as national interest, security, power, deterrence, and conflict. Students will gain insight into the various levels of warfare—tactical, operational, and strategic—and understand their significance in military planning. The students will analyze the concept of security in a broad context, examining its various dimensions including global, regional, human, energy, and environmental security. The determinants of national security, such as geography, political stability, scientific advancement, national morale, and intelligence, will be critically examined.

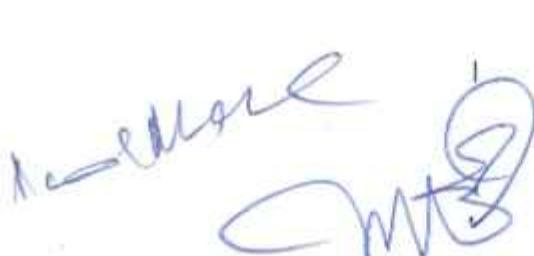

The course also delves into nuclear strategy, exploring theories of nuclear proliferation and deterrence, along with global disarmament efforts and India's stance on related treaties. Finally, students will engage with contemporary strategic challenges, particularly in South Asia, focusing on India's defence modernization, maritime strategy in the Indo-Pacific, and national counter-terrorism efforts. By the end of the course, students will be equipped with analytical tools to assess strategic developments and formulate informed perspectives on national and international security policies.

(a) Major Exam: 60
(b) Minor Tests-I & II: 20 each

(Duration of Major Examination: 3 hrs)
(Duration of Minor Tests: 1hr)

Course Outcome:

After successful completion of this course, students will have a comprehensive understanding of the foundational and advanced concepts in Geopolitics and Military Geography. Students will grasp the core definitions, scope, and strategic relevance of geopolitics and military geography, while critically engaging with classical geopolitical theories such as Mackinder's Heartland Theory, Spykman's Rimland Theory, and Mahan's Sea Power Theory. They will be able to apply key strategic concepts including power projection, strategic depth, and the role of chokepoints in global conflict dynamics. This course will equip students with the ability to analyze key geopolitical regions and strategic theatres such as Eurasia, the Indo-Pacific, West and Central Asia, and the polar regions, evaluating their military and strategic importance in current global power structures.

Students will gain practical knowledge of military geography, including terrain analysis, weather and climate impacts, logistics, and the influence of geography on conflict zones and border disputes. This course prepares students to critically assess contemporary challenges such as the role of GIS and satellite technology in warfare, the geopolitics of infrastructure and energy, and India's strategic positioning. Overall, students will develop analytical skills to assess and anticipate geopolitical trends and security threats in a spatial context.

Unit-I: Foundations of Geopolitics and Military Geography

- 1.1 Definitions, scope, and significance of geopolitics and military geography
- 1.2 Classical geopolitical theories: Mackinder's Heartland Theory, Spykman's Rimland Theory
- 1.3 Mahan's Sea Power Theory
- 1.4 Strategic concepts: Power projection, strategic depth and choke points

Unit-II: Geopolitical Regions and Strategic Theatres

- 2.1 Eurasia as a geopolitical pivot
- 2.2 Indo-Pacific region and maritime security
- 2.3 West Asia (Middle East), Central Asia, and their military geography
- 2.4 Geopolitics of Arctic and Antarctic

Unit-III: Military Geography and Strategic Planning

- 3.1 Terrain analysis: Mountains, deserts, jungles, urban areas
- 3.2 Climate, weather, and their impacts on operations

The primary objective of this course is to develop a comprehensive understanding of the foundations, practices, and evolving landscape of defence journalism. Students will gain critical insight into the evolution, scope, and significance of defence journalism in the context of national security and democratic accountability. They will become familiar with military terminologies and emerging defence technologies, enhancing their ability to report accurately and responsibly on military affairs. The course equips students with an in-depth understanding of India's security ecosystem, including the structure and roles of the Armed Forces, police, and paramilitary organizations. Students will critically analyze defence policies, procurement processes, and the significance of strategic communication, including military public relations and press briefings.

Students will also acquire reporting skills, including field reporting from conflict zones, investigative methods using RTI and OSINT, and effective writing techniques for news, features, and investigative reports. They will develop proficiency in visual storytelling through photojournalism, video production, and data visualization. Moreover, students will engage with legal and ethical dimensions of defence journalism, examining frameworks like the Official Secrets Act, censorship, and the impact of media on civil-military relations. They will be encouraged to explore the future trajectory of defence journalism, evaluating its challenges and opportunities in a rapidly changing security environment. Overall, students will emerge as informed, ethical, and technically skilled communicators capable of navigating and shaping the discourse on defence and national security.

Unit-I: Foundation of Defence Journalism

- 1.1 Evolution, scope and significance of defence journalism
- 1.2 Role of defence Journalism in democracy and national security
- 1.3 Principles of Journalism and defence reporting
- 1.4 Military Terminologies and emerging defence technologies

Unit-II: Defence and Security Ecosystem

Course Outcome:

Upon successful completion of this course, students will gain a comprehensive understanding of the fundamental concepts and frameworks of disaster management, with a specific focus on the Indian context. They will be able to classify various types of disasters—both natural and man-made—and analyse trends and vulnerabilities prevalent in India. The course will equip students with the ability to evaluate the historical evolution of disaster management in India, tracing the shift from reactive relief to proactive risk reduction. They will understand the legal and institutional mechanisms guiding disaster governance, including the Disaster Management Act, 2005, the National Policy on Disaster Management, and the functioning of key institutions such as NDMA, SDMAs, NIDM, and NDRF.

Students will explore strategies for Disaster Risk Reduction (DRR), emphasizing the integration of DRR into development planning. They will gain insights into the role of early warning systems, communication technologies, and ICT in disaster forecasting and response. The course will also emphasize community-based disaster preparedness (CBDP), highlighting the critical role of media, NGOs, and civil society. Finally, students will develop practical understanding of disaster response mechanisms, post-disaster recovery processes, and the emerging challenges posed by climate change, thereby preparing them to contribute effectively to disaster risk governance and resilience-building efforts.

(a) Major Exam: 60

(Duration of Major Examination: 3 hrs)

(b) Minor Tests-I & II: 20 each

(Duration of Minor Tests: 1 hr)

Course Outcome:

This course enables students to develop a comprehensive understanding of the economic principles and frameworks that underpin national defence strategies and military preparedness. It begins with an introduction to Defence Economics, exploring its definition, scope, and relevance in shaping defence policy. Students will engage with core economic theories, examine key determinants of defence expenditure—such as threat perception, national capability, and political strategy—and analyse the economic foundation of military power and war potential. Students will delve into the structure and process of defence budgeting, including the roles played by parliamentary financial committees and institutional mechanisms. The course also provides a historical overview of India's defence spending since 1947, complemented by comparative analysis of major global defence budgets (USA, China, Russia, France), fostering a global perspective on resource allocation and military financing.

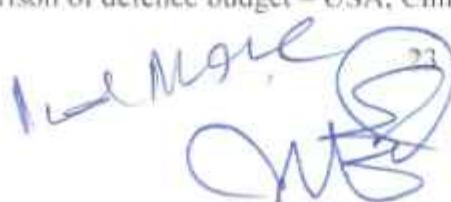

It focuses on the Indian defence industry, covering key public and private sector stakeholders, procurement policies, and case studies of major acquisitions. Students will assess the implications of policy initiatives such as Aatmanirbhar Bharat, Defence Corridors, FDI in defence sector, and joint ventures in promoting indigenous defence manufacturing and strategic autonomy. Finally, the course examines the economic dimensions of warfare, including economic warfare, alliance structures like NATO and QUAD, and the broader impact of war on national economies. Topics such as post-war reconstruction and burden-sharing mechanisms are analysed to understand the long-term economic effects of conflict. Overall, students will be equipped to critically evaluate defence economic policies and their strategic implications at both national and global levels.

Unit-I: Introduction to Defence Economics

- 1.1 Definition, Scope and significance of Defence Economics
- 1.2 Economic Theories of Defence Economics
- 1.3 Determinants of Defence Expenditure, Threat, Capabilities, Policies
- 1.4 Economic Foundation of Military Power, Assessment of War Potential of a Nation

Unit-II: Defence Budgeting: Structures, Trends, and Global Comparisons

- 2.1 Structure and Process of Defence Budgeting
- 2.2 Financial committees of the Parliament
- 2.3 Trends and Growth of Defence Spending
- 2.4 Comparison of defence budget – USA, China, India, Russia

(a) Major Exam: 60

(Duration of Major Examination: 3 hrs)

(b) Minor Tests-I & II: 20 each

(Duration of Minor Tests: 1:00 hr)

Course Outcome:

The primary objective of the course is to provide comprehensive understanding of the geopolitical, strategic, and security dimensions surrounding the region of Jammu and Kashmir. The course equips students with in-depth knowledge of the historical formation of J&K as a princely state, highlighting its strategic importance in the broader context of the Great Game and the Silk Road. Students will explore the critical role played by Dogra rulers and the positioning of J&K as a historical gateway to Central Asia. The course also examines the regional and international dynamics that influence the Kashmir issue, including territorial disputes in Gilgit-Baltistan, Aksai Chin, and Trans-Karakoram regions. Students will critically analyse the impact of India's wars with Pakistan and China and the involvement of global powers and international bodies, including the United Nations, in the conflict.

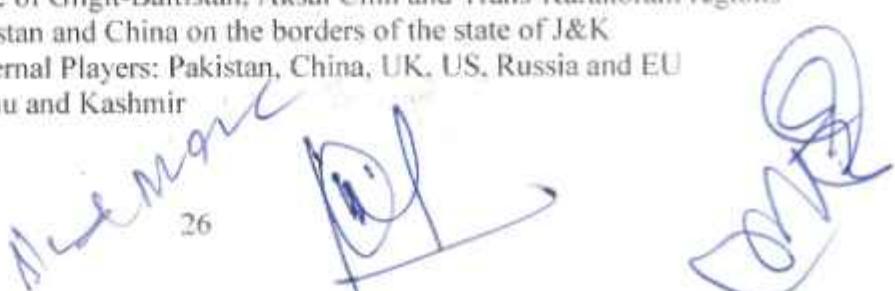

Students will develop a nuanced understanding of internal security challenges such as terrorism, insurgency, and proxy warfare in the region. They will examine the evolution and activities of extremist and separatist groups operating in J&K. Furthermore, the course delves into the operational frameworks and legal mechanisms employed in counterinsurgency and counterterrorism efforts, including the role of the Indian Army, paramilitary forces, special police units, and the legislative instruments like AFSPA and UAPA. By engaging with real-world security strategies and policies, students will be prepared to critically assess and contribute to policy debates on national security and conflict resolution related to J&K.

Unit-I: J&K and the Geopolitical Complex

- 1.1 Formation of Jammu and Kashmir as a Princely State
- 1.2 Geopolitical positioning of J&K with respect to The Great Game, Silk Road
- 1.3 Strategic and military engagements of Dogra rulers (1846-1947)
- 1.4 Warriors of/in J&K: Gen. Zorawar Singh, Brig. Rajinder Singh, Brig. Usman Khan, Maqbool Sherwani

Unit-II: Regional and International Dynamics

- 2.1 Geo-strategic significance of Gilgit-Baltistan, Aksai Chin and Trans-Karakoram regions
- 2.2 Impact of wars with Pakistan and China on the borders of the state of J&K
- 2.3 Strategic Interests of External Players: Pakistan, China, UK, US, Russia and EU
- 2.4 UN Resolutions on Jammu and Kashmir

(a) Major Exam: 60
(b) Minor Tests-I & II: 20 each

(Duration of Major Examination: 3 hrs)
(Duration of Minor Tests: 1 hr)

Course Outcome:

This course provides a comprehensive understanding of India's territorial and maritime security frameworks, emphasizing both historical and contemporary challenges and responses. Students will gain insight into the historical and geopolitical evolution of India's land boundaries and explore the implications of border disputes on national security. The course highlights the strategic role played by Central Armed Police Forces such as the BSF, ITBP, and Assam Rifles in safeguarding borders, while also examining infrastructural advancements like fencing, surveillance systems, and smart border management technologies. Through an in-depth study of cross-border threats—including terrorism, infiltration, illegal migration, narco-terrorism, and weapon smuggling—students will be equipped to analyze the nature of these challenges and evaluate India's countermeasures and military preparedness. Mechanisms for conflict de-escalation and resolution, such as flag meetings and border personnel meetings (BPMs), are also explored.

In the maritime domain, the course introduces students to India's coastline, maritime zones, and strategic chokepoints, while assessing the nation's maritime security strategy. The role, structure, and modernization of the Indian Navy and Coast Guard are discussed alongside concerns like port and island security. Students will critically engage with traditional and non-traditional maritime threats, India's responses to the growing Chinese presence in the Indian Ocean, and the country's participation in multilateral cooperation mechanisms like IORA, QUAD, and the Indo-Pacific strategy. Legal frameworks such as UNCLOS and India's maritime laws are also examined, fostering a well-rounded understanding of ocean governance and naval diplomacy.

Unit-I: Territorial Security – Concepts and Border Management

- 1.1 Historical and geopolitical overview of India's land boundaries (AGPL, IB, LAC, LoC)
- 1.2 Border disputes and their impact on national security
- 1.3 Role of CAPF in Border Management (BSF, ITBP, Assam Rifles, etc.)
- 1.4 Border area development and security infrastructure: Fencing, surveillance systems and technology-based management

Unit-II: Threats to Territorial Security

- 2.1 Cross-border terrorism, infiltration and illegal migration
- 2.2 Narco-terrorism and weapon smuggling
- 2.3 India's military deployments and countermeasures along borders

(Duration of Major Examination: 3 hrs)
(Duration of Minor Tests: 1:00 hr)

Course Outcome:

The primary objective of this course is to develop a comprehensive understanding of the interplay between state formation and security in the complex geopolitical landscape of South Asia. Students will understand the historical processes of colonialism, partition, and post-independence nation-building that have shaped contemporary political structures across South Asian states. It equips them to analyse the diversity of state regimes - ranging from democracies to hybrid and authoritarian models - alongside challenges posed by ethnic and religious pluralism and the role of militaries in domestic politics. This course will provide students with analytical tools to assess major regional security challenges, including enduring interstate conflicts such as the India-Pakistan rivalry and the Sino-Indian border disputes. Students will be aware of the strategic impact of nuclearization, deterrence doctrines, and evolving security alignments shaped by big power interests during and after the Cold War.

Students will understand the security discourse by addressing non-traditional threats including environmental degradation, poverty, health crises, and migration. They will learn how these issues transcend national borders and undermine human security across the region. Students will understand the effectiveness of organizations like SAARC and BIMSTEC, while also exploring soft power, diplomacy, and future security paradigms. Overall, the course prepares students to critically analyze South Asia's evolving security architecture within a global context.

Unit I: State Formation and Political Structures in South Asia

- 1.1 Historical context: colonial legacies, partition, and nation-building in South Asia
- 1.2 State structures: democracy, authoritarianism, and hybrid regimes
- 1.3 Ethnic and religious diversity: identity politics and state stability
- 1.4 Civil-military relations: role of militaries in politics in South Asia

Unit II: Regional Security Challenges

- 2.1 Cold War and South Asia: Big Powers Rivalry
- 2.2 Interstate conflicts: India-Pakistan rivalry, Indo-China border disputes
- 2.3 Nuclearization of South Asia: deterrence, doctrines, and arms control.
- 2.4 Strategic alliances: India's Act East policy, Pakistan's alignment with China, and US Influence

- 3.1 Environmental security: climate change, water disputes
- 3.2 Economic security: poverty, inequality, and illicit economies
- 3.3 Human security: migration, refugee crises, and gender-based violence
- 3.4 Pandemic and health security in South Asia

Unit IV: Regional Cooperation and Global Influences

- 4.1 Regional organizations: SAARC, BIMSTEC, and their role in security cooperation
- 4.2 External powers: China's Belt and Road Initiative, US Indo-Pacific strategy
- 4.3 Soft power and diplomacy: India's cultural influence
- 4.4 Future trends: South Asia's role in global geopolitics and emerging security paradigms

Course Outcome:

This course on Information Warfare equips students with a comprehensive understanding of how information is weaponized in modern conflicts and political environments. Students will be able to critically analyze the conceptual foundations and historical evolution of information warfare, including key components like propaganda, psychological operations, cyber warfare, and the emerging domains of cognitive warfare and influence operations. They will gain insight into significant historical milestones such as Cold War-era disinformation and post-9/11 strategic communication campaigns, enabling them to identify various forms of harmful content, including disinformation, misinformation and malinformation. Students will explore the tools and tactics used in the digital information ecosystem, such as social media platforms, encrypted messaging apps, and algorithmic amplification. They will be introduced to psychological techniques like narrative framing, memetics and manipulation through cognitive biases. The course also emphasizes the role of emerging technologies including deepfakes, generative AI and synthetic media, and trains students in Open-Source Intelligence (OSINT) as a method for tracking and analyzing information operations.

The course focuses on the societal and security implications of information warfare—such as polarization, erosion of trust, and infrastructure vulnerability—and the development of effective counter-strategies like media literacy and public awareness. Ethical and legal aspects, including dilemmas in journalism, data privacy, and cyber law, are examined. Finally, students will learn to craft and evaluate strategic communication approaches to counter hostile narratives and uphold information integrity in national and international contexts.

Unit-I: Conceptual Foundations and Strategic Context of Information Warfare

1.1 Definition and components: Propaganda, Psychological Operations, Cyber Warfare, Disinformation, Misinformation, and Malinformation
 1.2 Digital ecosystems: Social Media, Encrypted Apps, and Algorithmic Amplification
 1.3 Psychological tactics: Narrative Framing, Memetics and Cognitive Biases

M.A. Defence and Strategic Studies under NEP (Vocational Course)
Course Code: P2DSVC251 (Vocational Course: Defence Journalism)
Examination to be held in May-2026, 2027 and 2028

Note: The students who intend to exit after first year (after Semester-II) of the 02 years PG Programme and desire to get PG Diploma of completion of first year need to obtain additional 04 credits from work based vocational course during summer term. It is employed that after completing the 04 credits vocational course, the student should be able to generate some livelihood after exiting the university.

Internship

Sr. No.	Course No.	Title of the Course	Contact Hours/Week	Maximum Marks	Credits
11. (a)	P2DSVC251	Defence Journalism	8 weeks	100	4

It shall be a short-term internship/Project of 8 weeks duration at the end of Semester 2nd during the summer vacations for students opting for PG Diploma in Defence and Strategic studies after completion of two semesters. Students will go for a job/professional training in a suitable organization or hands on training or activity-based course at university level in order to gain work experience. All students will undergo internships/ Apprenticeships/project in institutions like think tanks, defence agencies, media organisations or military organizations helps students gain insights into operational frameworks and decision-making structures. The internship also fosters professional networking, enhances communication and reporting abilities, and prepares students for careers in defence analysis, diplomacy, intelligence, or strategic consultancy, contributing meaningfully to national and global security discourse, Parliament or elected representatives, media organizations, and a wide variety of organizations so that students may actively engage with the practical side of their learning and, as a by-product, further improve their employability.

Course Outcome:

The internship in Defence and Strategic Studies will equip the students with practical insights into national security, strategic policymaking, and international relations. It enhances their ability to apply theoretical knowledge in real-world settings such as military institutions, think tanks, or government agencies. Students develop critical thinking, analytical, and professional skills, including report writing and policy evaluation. The internship fosters a deeper understanding of defence mechanisms, geopolitical dynamics, and contemporary security challenges. It also provides exposure to the ethical and operational aspects of strategic work, helping students explore career opportunities and build professional networks in the field of defence and strategic studies.

(b) Minor Tests-I & II: 20 each

(Duration of Minor Tests: 1hr)

Course Outcome:

This course offers an in-depth exploration of the evolution of warfare in Bharat from the Vedic age through the colonial period, providing students with a broad historical and strategic perspective on indigenous military systems. By the end of the course, students will gain a comprehensive understanding of the philosophies, strategies, organisation, and technological advancements that defined Indian warfare across different eras. Students will begin by examining early military traditions during the Vedic period, including the principles of Dhamurveda, and explore significant historical events such as Alexander's invasion and the Battle of Hydaspes. The course will then move into the structured military systems of the Mauryan and Gupta empires, as well as Harshavardhana's rule, emphasizing the evolution of state-controlled armies and war administration.

In the medieval period, students will analyse the warfare practices of the Rajputs, Delhi Sultanate, Mughals, and Southern Indian dynasties like the Pallavas, Chalukyas, and Cholas, gaining insights into regional variations in strategy, fortification, and weaponry. The course further explores the dynamic military transformations in post-16th century India, including the guerrilla warfare of the Marathas and the rise and resistance of the Sikh Empire under Maharaja Ranjit Singh. Lastly, students will critically assess the impact of British colonialism on Indian military systems, focusing on the East India Company's warfare practices, the 1857 revolt, and India's role in global conflicts through the British Indian Army. Overall, the course equips students with analytical tools to understand how indigenous warfare shaped and responded to political change, foreign invasions, and colonial impositions throughout Indian history.

Unit-I: Warfare in Ancient India

- 1.1 Warfare during Vedic period, Dhamurveda
- 1.2 Alexander's Invasion of India, Battle of Hydaspes
- 1.3 Military System of the Mauryan Empire
- 1.4 Military Organisation under Gupta Empire and Harshvardhana

Unit-II: Military Warfare in Medieval India

- 2.1 Military system Under Rajputs, Battle of Tarori I and II
- 2.2 Military System Under Delhi Sultanate
- 2.3 Formation of Mughal Empire, Battle of Panipat I and II
- 2.4 Military System of Pallava, Chalukas, Chola

Course Outcome:

Upon successful completion of this course, students will have gained a comprehensive understanding of the historical evolution and modernization of military technology, from early weapon systems like muskets and artillery to the latest advancements in disruptive and dual-use technologies. They will be able to analyse the impact of the Revolution in Military Affairs and critically assess the factors influencing the choice and development of contemporary weapon systems. Students will develop insight into the role of international control regimes and treaties that regulate military technology, and understand India's strategic efforts to maintain technological autonomy through its Defence Research and Development Organization (DRDO), ISRO, academia, and private sector partnerships. They will also explore policies related to technology transfer in the defence sector.

The course will equip students with knowledge of emerging technologies shaping modern warfare, including missile and space systems, drone warfare, stealth technologies, directed energy weapons, and biotechnology's applications in security. Furthermore, students will gain expertise in cyber warfare and advanced digital technologies such as artificial intelligence, Internet of Things (IOT), virtual reality, big data, cloud computing, blockchain, and quantum computing. By integrating technical, strategic, and policy perspectives, students will be prepared to critically evaluate current and future trends in defence technology, understand the challenges of cyber security, and contribute meaningfully to discussions on national security and technological innovation in defence.

Unit-I: Evolution of Military Technology and Modernisation Trends

- 1.1 Military technology: history and evolution
- 1.2 Evolution of muskets, cannons and artillery
- 1.3 Revolution in Military Affairs, Choice of weapon systems
- 1.4 Military modernization: Emerging, Disruptive and Dual use technologies

Unit-II: Control Regimes and India's Strategic Autonomy in Defence R&D

- 2.1 Control regimes, international regimes and treaties on technology
- 2.2 Defence research and Development: DRDO and ISRO, Academia and private sectors
- 2.3 India's technology vision and strategic autonomy in security policy
- 2.4 Transfer of Technology in defence sector

Course Outcome:

The objective of this paper is to make students aware of internal and external determinants of China's domestic and foreign policy and its evolution since Mao Zedong-led Communist regime's control of the country from Nationalist regime of Chiang Kai-Shek. How this change shaped China's standing in the international system.

With the world's second largest population, second largest economy and third largest military, China's position is largely shaping as challenger to the global status quo. This course covers modern China's history, domestic politics, and foreign policy and provides students with a sophisticated understanding of how China emerged as one of the most important state in world politics. This course will enable students to estimate the role of China in international politics and economics; illustrate and evaluate the alternative explanation of China's emergence; facilitate the understanding of the concepts of politics and engagement strategies pursued by China and its impact on regional and international politics; and familiarize the students with the policies and mechanisms of China in achieving and sustaining economic growth. In other words, this course will enable the students to estimate the role of China in international politics and economics. To illustrate and evaluate the alternative concepts of politics and engagement strategies championed by China and its impacts on regional and international politics.

This course will assist students to learn how to identify variables and frame hypotheses, understand how to develop questionnaire and conduct interview schedule. After honing these skills, they will learn how to design research from the standpoint of linear and wheel models of research. In the end, the course will introduce students how to cite sources and list the as references. The course will also focus on research ethics to assist students to understand how conduct of research ethically and in a robust manner.

(b) Minor Tests-I & II: 20 each

(Duration of Minor Tests: 1 hr)

Course Outcome:

Peace and Conflict Studies is a new interdisciplinary and problem-oriented course which explores the processes through which actors have attempted to define and build peace in areas affected by war and violence, particularly since the end of the Cold War. This course serves as the introduction to the broad and diverse field of peace and conflict studies. It will critically address the conceptualization of peace and the implementation of peacebuilding projects by global, regional, national and local actors, including the UN, INGOs, and local organisations in conflict-affected environments. It will also focus on different conflict mediation, conflict resolution and peace-making techniques to understand and analyze how to create conditions to attain peace. The course will also focus on the lack of state capacity, economic motivations for war, and ineffective global responses will be a direct area of inquiry.

After completion of this course, the student is expected to demonstrate the ability to identify central concepts in peace and conflict studies, to account for key theoretical assumptions on the causes, dynamics and resolution of armed conflict, and to apply these concepts to explain the causes, dynamics and resolution of armed conflict. They will also hone skills to describe principal features of the nature and development of conflicts within and between states from 1945 until present day and ability to account for the central assumptions of the main theories of IR, and of the so-called broadened security agenda, and apply these assumptions to explain the security behaviour of actors.

Unit-I: Introduction and Concepts

- 1.1 Background: Moving Beyond the Absence of War to Peace
- 1.2 Peace: Definition and Concept
- 1.3 Typology of Peace
- 1.4 Structure of Conflict at Interstate, Regional and Systemic Levels

Unit-II: Territorial Issues and Peace Movements

- 2.1 Understanding the Evolution of Peace (1900 onwards)
- 2.2 Territorial Issues and the Evolution of Peace
- 2.3 Peace Movements
- 2.4 Nuclear Danger and Nuclear Free Zones
